

NORTHERN NEW JERSEY

New renovated area of the campus center totals more than 16,000 s/f

DMR Architects completes student center at Bergen Community College in Paramus

PARAMUS, NJ — DMR Architects completed work on the new student center at the main campus of Bergen Community College.

Lloyd Rosenberg

In early 2008, DMR Architects was hired by Bergen Community College to design a new student center to address significant growth in student, faculty and staff

Bergen Community College

traffic. In addition, DMR Architects' design addressed many other needs of the college, including the lack of a main entrance to the Student Center, poor efficiency and functionality, lack of space for the food service company, and lack of an outdoor seating area for students. The new design solution included a new main entrance, re-configured interior space, additional seating areas and a new foot traffic circulation pattern.

The new building, which officially opened on October 18,

2011, will assist the college's faculty and staff, as well as provide additional student leadership offices to serve the college's more than 17,000 students.

"DMR Architects is proud to be a part of such an important project for Bergen Community College. We were thrilled to assist in the expansion of the student center, and are excited about the opportunities the new building will provide to the entire campus community," Lloyd Rosenberg, president and CEO, DMR Architects, said. ■